A minor league baseball team serves the 16oz. Stadium Cup at games for children's drinks. The cup has a lid and straw available so children are less prone to make a mess at their seat. The cup also shows the location of the 'Kid Zone' for children to go have fun at before, during, or after the game. The team might also hand out the cup along with a tightly wrapped t-shirt inside as a souvenir, to the first 1,000 fans attending the day's game.

A local zoo has some Stadium Cups printed for children to take along with them to feed the animals. There are measuring lines along the side of the cups for children and their parents, that addresses how much food each animal is allowed to get.

A local business has its' annual Holiday Celebration for its' employees and their families. The company has 16oz. cups printed for employees to use and take home with them.

A school and its' football team go out into the community to raise money for the team to buy new equipment. The school orders some cups, lids, and straws and has the football schedule printed along the side. Members of the team try to sell the cups to residents, along with a discount card for them to use at multiple restaurants around the community. Residents now have the cup and the card to have as souvenirs.
